The Diversity Club at the Petoskey High School was created and organized by and for students. This club is a place where kids join together to learn about different cultures and to learn a little bit about themselves. Many of the members also hope to help students understand that every single person is different from the next, and this is something that we cannot control. The club wants to show others that these differences are not a reason to hate or be disrespectful of others, but instead an opportunity for learning and growth. There is one thing that all students have in common at a very base level: they are all humans.

Many of these students have faced some uncomfortable discrimination at school. They have been shouted at. They have been told that they "don't belong." They have been called names while walking down the hall. Some have seen Nazi and other inappropriate hand gestures in the hallway. Many have also been attacked under the guise of humor and then teased that they "can't take a joke." The students in the Diversity Club are afraid that this type of taunting will never stop and that perhaps society is moving backward.

The dreams of the Diversity Club members are similar to all of our dreams... they want to feel safe and live their lives. Their dreams sound familiar: going to college, going to art school, becoming a therapist to help others, becoming a musician to share experiences, living in the greater multi-cultural community, feeling safe.

While some of these club members have been harassed while in school, they do have a few safe havens available to them. Mrs. Lesky and Mrs. Patterson's rooms are places where they can relax and be themselves. They also stated that the Petoskey District Library is a place where they know all the staff will treat them kindly. They especially like the teen area for the support and welcoming atmosphere. They like to just hang out or attend programs and browse the collection of materials to read and listen. "It's just nice to have another place in town to feel safe."

The Diversity Club would love to see the library host different events where people can come together and learn that differences are OK. They also think discussions about tough topics to help people learn about those differences are imperative, to help people learn how to listen and ask hard questions of each other. The safety they feel in the library comes in part from the trust the Diversity Club has in the staff to speak up if someone sees or hears something that could be hurtful. This is an easy ask. Everyone in our community could commit to speaking up when hearing a comment that come across as racist, sexist, or hurtful in other ways. If we all work on reminding our peers to be more mindful of our words, it can go a long way towards peace and kindness. The Diversity Club partnered with the Petoskey District Library to create the graphic images for the library's #supporttheirstories community read events. See page 5 for more information about this summer's community read.

DIRECTOR

VAL MEYERSON

"I'm sorry to bother you..."

This is a comment the library staff hears quite a bit, and one that always concerns us because our number one priority is taking care of our patrons. We are never bothered when you ask us questions! I know it seems as if we are busy when we are at our desks, but we are busy waiting for our next patron interaction. Even though there are plenty of tasks to accomplish on a day-to-day basis, we do them between patron interactions. We are masters of multi-tasking!

All staff have projects they are working on – but truly, we are all here for you and look forward to you "bothering us!" The departmental staff, when not assisting you in finding a new favorite read or helping on the computers, are ordering and processing new materials, program planning, and trouble-shooting all sorts of problems. Our circulation staff are always working on moving items to and from other libraries, creating and setting up displays, planning a book discussion, or organizing outreach materials.

FROM THE DIRECTOR

While all these projects are important and need to be completed, they always come second to helping you – the patron that is in the building.

I think the reason many people are hesitant to ask for help is because the library can be intimidating and many think that they should “know” how to find things. Believe me, we understand that the library is confusing and it can be hard to locate materials, which is why there are staff on each floor to help. So, please ask away, bother us, and help us do our jobs!
